COUNTY IS SWEEPED BY SEVERE STORM

Electric Display is Most Vivid Seen Here in Years—.86 of Inch Rainfall Recorded.

WASHINGTON COUNTY HIT

One Woman Believed Fatally Hurt, Another Painfully Injured—Four Houses are Wrecked.

Jackson county emerged with very little damage from the severe wind and electrical storm which raged from 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night until 2:30 o'clock this morning and was much more fortunate than surrounding counties. Some damage was done to the orchards by the wind, it is reported, and a few telephone wires are entangled but the extent of the damage is almost nothing as compared to that in other counties in this section of the state.

A section of Washington county, three miles northeast of Campbellsburg, just south of the Jackson county line, was hard hit by the storm. According to reports coming from that vicinity, one woman was perhaps fatally injured, another was painfully hurt and four houses were damaged by the wind. One house was practically destroyed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wilcox is not expected to live. The wind practically demolished her home and she was pinioned under a heavy stone which was blown from the chimney. Two men were required to remove the stone from her body. She sustained fracture of both arms, a broken hip and it is believed that she is severely injured internally. The house was unroofed by the gale and the furniture was picked up and blown to the yard. The walls of the house were also damaged, the reports say.

A house belonging to Charles Green was also wrecked by the wind. Mrs. Green was injured by falling debris, but her condition is not considered serious. The furniture in the Green home was also tossed to the outside of the partly demolished house. Another building owned by A. C. Tippens was damaged by the wind which swept through the valley in cyclonic formation. The home of Elijah Brewer, who lives near Oak Grove, Washington county, adjoining the section that was hardest hit by the storm, was picked up from its foundation and carried a short distance into the yard. The damage to this house will be considerable.

A number of houses were damaged in Bartholomew county, according to reports reaching Columbus. The storm in that vicinity seemed to cen-

BIG TASK FOR RAILROADS

By United Press. The militia under the direct orders of General Funston will be distributed along the international boundary line from the Gulf of Mexico to California at once. They will be assigned to patrol duty releasing the entire force of regulars now engaged in that work, for actual invasion of Mexico in case war is declared.

MORE RECRUITS NEEDED FOR CO. K.

Capt. Abel Still Has Room for All Able Bodied Young Men Who Can Get Away.

NEW OFFICER IS ASSIGNED

Capt. Greene, Retired, of Indianapolis Co., Given Post of First Lieutenant in Local Company.

Tomorrow may be the last chance to enlist in Company K, as Capt. Osear B. Abel expects to receive orders to entrain some time Friday. Directions as to the train to take and other details of preparation were contained in general orders received this morning and all that is now necessary is the order to start.

Recruiting continued throughout the day, several more men being passed by Lieut. Kyte, examining physician. There is plenty of room for more recruits, however, and the officers of the company are still hoping to recruit up to the required strength without going out of Seymour for men. "This is a Seymour company and I want to keep it that, if possible," said Capt. Abel this morning. "However, if I can not get enough men here at home, I will have to go outside to get them, as I mean to go when the order comes." Capt. Abel added that he had offers of men from Madison and Columbus, but was holding off to await the results of the local recruiting.

Lieut. Kyte said this morning that no one would be passed unless he came fully up to the required standards. "To pass physically unfit men in now would only mean that they would be rejected at Fort Harrison," he explained. "What we want is young men of bouncing vitality; we can't use invalids. We need strong, healthy and ambitious men of tomorrow—and we need them today. Let's

INJURIES PROVE FATAL TO THOMAS A. PHILLIPS

Employee at Local Livery Barn Dies from Injuries Sustained when Kicked by a Horse.

Thomas A. Phillips, aged forty-two years, died early today at his home on South Poplar street, as the result of injuries sustained Monday morning when he was kicked by a horse while engaged in his employment at Hopewell's livery barn. He was hurt internally and little hope was extended for his recovery.

Mr. Phillips was born in Allsdales county, Michigan, February 28, 1874, and his exact age was forty-two years, three months and twenty-four days. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Phillips. He had lived in this city since boyhood and was well known here. He was industrious and because of his disposition made friends rapidly. He is survived by his widow, three children, four brothers, Andrew, James, William, of this city, and Albert, of Indianapolis, and one sister, Mrs. William Sager, of Chestnut Ridge. He was a member of the local camp of Modern Woodmen.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the St. Paul Congregational church, conducted by the pastor, the Rev. H. R. Booch. Burial at Riverview cemetery.

NEW LEGAL POINT HEARD BY COUNCIL

Involves Right of Commissioners to Order Streets Improved Without Consent of Council.

RESULTS IN LONG DISCUSSION

Some of the Members Not Disposed to Complicate Proposed Work Unless it is a Detriment to City.

Whether or not the county commissioners have the authority to order the improvement of a city street without first obtaining permission from the city council is a disputed point of law among local attorneys and was the subject of considerable discussion at the regular meeting of the board of works Tuesday night. The discussion relates to the proposed improvement of Sixth street and Vine street which are included in petitions approved by the commissioners at their June session.

City Attorney Kasting questions the right of the county commissioners to order the improvement of any street within the corporate limits of this city without first securing permission from the council to do so. He pointed out that the city streets are built on a certain grade in conformity to the city plat and that the council was sole jurisdiction over such improvements. He said that permission must first be secured from the council so that the improvements within the city could be made under the jurisdiction of the city engineer.

County Attorney Seba A. Barnes takes the opposite position and told the commissioners when the question was first presented with the filing of the petitions that consent of the council to improve city streets was not required by law. Other attorneys hold divergent opinions on the requirements of the law.

Lengthy discussion followed the presentation of the point but no action was taken. It is probable that the question will be discussed and finally settled at the meeting of the council Thursday night. While the councilmen asked numerous questions few of them expressed opinion as to whether or not the commissioners should be required to get consent to improve the streets included in the improvement petitions. Those who did have views on the question felt as if the council should not step in at this time and complicate the work unless the proposed improvement was a detriment to the city. During the discussion it was suggested that the

PARTY TO INSPECT JACKSON HIGHWAY

Officials Making Trip Over Proposed National Route will Reach This City Thursday.

ROUTE IN COUNTY MARKED

Seymour, Brownstown and Vallonia Delegations to Meet Officials Inspecting the Way.

Four officials of the Jackson Highway—from Chicago to New Orleans—are scheduled to reach this city Thursday and the members of the Jackson County Motor Club are planning to meet the party north of this city. The officials are making an inspection of the proposed route and are expected to decide if the Jackson way is to become a national highway. The officials left Chicago Tuesday following the route through Frankfort to Indianapolis. The Franklin-Edinburg-Columbus road is to be a part of the Jackson Highway. From Columbus the party will follow the Jonesville road to this city and the Salem road from here to Louisville. Two routes are proposed out of Nashville, Tenn., and the officials will transverse one going to New Orleans and the other on the return trip. They will then decide which is to be approved.

The proposed route has been marked through this county. John Vande Walle was placed in charge of this work by the Jackson County Motor Club and has marked the road from the Bartholomew-Jackson county line to Brownstown. The Brownstown motorists mark the road from that place to Vallonia and the good road enthusiasts at Vallonia continued the work to the Washington-Jackson county line.

The road is designated by the initials "J-H" stenciled on every tenth telephone pole. The letters are of such size that they can be seen for a considerable distance. In case of cross roads and turns the right direction is indicated by an arrow so that there is no likelihood of any tourist losing his way while enroute from Chicago to New Orleans. The entire distance has been marked in the same way, carrying out the uniform plan that was approved by the officials of the proposed road.

The Jackson Highway enthusiasts, looking well into the future, are expecting the government to make it a military road. In this case the government will pay part of the improvement of the highway and the

BATTLE REPORTED ALONG THE BORDER

Unconfirmed Report to Immigration Officer at El Paso Tells of a Conflict.

BELL ALSO HEARS THE RUMOR

Situation Along Border More Serious than at Any Time Since Mexican Revolt Began.

By United Press.

El Paso, Tex., June 21.—Fighting has taken place between Carranzista and United States troops, according to an unconfirmed report received early to-day by an immigration officer here. The advance column of cavalry dispatched south from Namiqipa in pursuit of bandits were attacked by troops of the de facto government, this report stated.

General Bell, commanding the United States troops in El Paso, said he had no official confirmation of the reported attack. Bell admitted that he had heard from the Columbus, N. M., base camp in regard to the fighting but that the Columbus reports were also without official confirmation.

It is known the column of American cavalry was officially reported within a short distance of a Carranzista force and that a conflict seemed imminent.

The situation along the border today was more serious than at any time since the Mexican revolt began five years ago. El Paso authorities believe that it is only a question of hours until the United States and the Mexican de facto government will be in a state of war.

General George Bell, commanding at Ft. Bliss, today denied rumors of fighting between Carranzista and United States troops south of Namiqipa.

"If there was any truth in the report, I would have received official confirmation of the fighting by this time," said Bell.

Mexican sniping is believed to have caused reports of a clash. The American forces and the Carranzistas face each other south of Namiqipa and local authorities still believe a clash imminent.

General Traveni, commander of the north, is preparing to leave Chihuahua City with his staff, personally to take the field, refugees declared.

Reports received by state department agents indicate that the de facto government is making every preparation for hostilities. Troops are being mobilized, recruiting is going on and large forces are being sent to northern points.

General Carranza is reported today to have called to Mexico City immediately collectors of customs at border points, ordering them to bring all the money of their offices with them.

Reports recent arrivals reported anti-American demonstrations in several states encouraged by officials of the de facto government.

General Pershing is reported today to be at Colonia, Dublin, where his largest force is entrenched. Preparations have been made to rush re-enforcement to Namiqipa if the American troops there are attacked.

Motor trucks leaving Columbus with ammunition and supplies for the punitive expedition are heavily guarded.

CARRANZA AND CABINET CONSIDER AMERICAN NOTE

First Chief Says He will Make No Comment Until After Session Has Adjourned.

By United Press.

Mexico City, June 21.—General Carranza and his cabinet met in special session today to consider the American note. Carranza and all members of the cabinet denied themselves to correspondents before the session began. They sent out word they would have absolutely no comment to make until after the session adjourned.

FUNSTON GETS NEW RECRUITING ORDER

Instructed to Raise Two More Regiments for Regular Army—Instructions Mailed.

BUT ONE REQUEST FOR MILITIA

Funston Denies That He Has Made Another Request for State's Guardsmen at Border.

By United Press.

San Antonio, Tex., June 21.—Major-General Funston was ordered by the war department today to recruit at once six new regiments for the regular army, four of infantry and two of cavalry. Detailed instructions were mailed him from Washington. Recruiting will start at once.

General Funston denied a report circulated had made a second request for militia to be sent to the border. He said the only request he had made was the one made public yesterday.

General Pershing's scouting parties, thrown out along the line of communication of the American army in Mexico, have found no Mexican detachments at any point within touch of their lines.

This was officially reported to Funston today and is believed to have disposed of rumors that an attack was imminent along the 285 mile line to Namiqipa.

Reports reached Ft. Sam Houston today that the Mexicans at Ojinaga are assuming a threatening attitude.

PRESIDENT INTERPRETS THE SUFFRAGE PLANK

Wilson Says Democratic Convention Gives Right to Individual States.

By United Press.

Washington, June 21.—President Wilson interpreted the suffrage plank in the Democratic platform as being an approval of the suffrage movement but recommending that it should have its inception in the individual states.

The president told Mrs. D. E. Hooker, of the Virginia federation of labor, that the Democratic plank did not necessarily disapprove the federal amendment idea but recommended that the movement be taken up state by state.

CARRANZA GOVERNMENT IS DOOMED TO DESTRUCTION

De Facto Structure is Rapidly Disintegrating, According to Administration Official.

SOME OTHER LEADER NEEDED

By United Press.

Washington, June 21.—The Carranza government is nearing its end, a high administration official said today. The machinery is crumbling and only an unexpected right about face in Carranza's methods can prevent the government's complete disintegration, this official said, even long enough for it to be replaced by a government sufficiently strong to prevent near anarchy in the southern republic.

Today no official could be found who would not admit, privately at least, that watchful waiting has run its course. Officials themselves pointed to the note sent to Carranza as evidence that President Wilson and Secretary Lansing are finally convinced that some other man than Carranza and some other government than the present de facto structure are needed to bring Mexico out of her ten-year period of revolution, rebellion and internal strife.

The Creamlike CRISCO For Fryng - For Shortening For Cake Making

It scarcely would be possible to imagine more ideal conditions of manufacture than those existing in the spotless Crisco factory. Human hands do not come in contact with Crisco from the time the oil is subjected to the process, until you open the attractive can in your own kitchen.

Crisco is unlike any other food product. Never has it been possible, before the discovery of the Crisco Process, to produce a solid fat from a vegetable oil without adding a stiffening agent. Nothing is added to Crisco. It is all vegetable, all pure, all digestible. It is the best or solid cream of the oil.

Crisco does more for cooking than any other fat known. The beneficial result of Crisco foods upon the digestion is as great in importance as the fact that they are more delicious.

Crisco is now used chiefly in those thousands of homes where men and women are most alert to the improvement of cooking methods and family digestion. They use Crisco for frying, for shortening, for cake making.

Make some simple test of Crisco. Then you will take pride in finding other ways of employing this product, which makes better foods—foods that are better for you.

LOCATE BUILDINGS ON FARM

Often Pays to Move Some of Houses in Order to Secure a More Convenient Arrangement.

The location of the buildings on a farm has a great deal to do with the time it takes to do the work. It will often pay to move some of the buildings in order to secure a more convenient arrangement. W. C. Palmer of the North Dakota experiment station tells how this was done on one farm with the following results: Under the old plan it required walking 53 miles a year just carrying in water. Under the new plan the water was piped into the house—no walking required. Bringing in the wood under the old plan required walking 22 miles. Under the new arrangement this was reduced to 8 1/2 miles. The trips made to the machine shed during the year amounted to 57 1-3 miles; by the new arrangement it was reduced to 11 1/2 miles. By the new arrangement the year's trips in feeding the hogs was reduced 102 1/2 miles and in caring for the chickens three miles were saved. The total saving for the year through rearranging the farmstead was 217 1-3 miles.

It was found that the time used in walking these 217 1-3 miles was worth $36.74. It must be remembered that it was not only a case of walking three miles, but it was usually with something to carry.

COULD NOT WALK

And For Four Years, Could Not Stand Without Support.

Chillicothe, Ohio—"Nothing pleases me more than to speak a word of praise for Cardui, the woman's tonic," says Mrs. Ed Davis, of this town, "for I firmly believe that it snatched me from the grave."

I have been married 14 years, and had two children. After the youngest was born, I was not able to walk, and for four years, I was not strong enough to stand on my feet five minutes at the time, without something to support me.

Nothing seemed to do me any good, until, finally, I commenced using Cardui, the woman's tonic. I only used about four bottles, but, today I am well, can do my work, and walk as far as I want to.

I can never praise Cardui enough, and my neighbors cannot get done wondering at the change in me."

You, too, can depend on Cardui, because Cardui is a gentle, harmless, vegetable tonic, that can do you nothing but good.

Prepared from vegetable herbs, Cardui has a specific effect on the woman's constitution, and puts strength where it is needed.

Try Cardui.

WHAT CAN YOU DO FOR CATARRH?

Ask Yourself the question. How often has the doctor failed, as have ointments, salves, vapours? What you should do.

The easy, common-sense method—that costs so little—that is so quickly and vigorously effective—is often the last resort of many Catarrh sufferers. Why, it is hard to say. One of the specialists of the Swift Specific Company in Atlanta—a physician of standing and national reputation because of his knowledge of blood disorders, made the assertion that if the majority of Catarrh sufferers would buy and faithfully take S. S. S., they could effectually get rid of Catarrh.

S. S. S. goes straight to the seat of trouble, the blood. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, comes through the veins and arteries, enables the mucous surfaces to exchange acids and irritating substances for red blood corpuscles that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all Catarrhal poison. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucous accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in process of purification.

S. S. S. is made from barks, roots and herbs that are food and tonic for the blood. It stimulates—gives the blood power to throw off poisons. You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely Catarrh often infests the entire system.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. It is a remarkable remedy for all blood affections, such as Eczema, Rash, Lupus, Tetter, Psoriasis, Boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write The Swift Specific Company, Medical Department, Room 11, Atlanta, Ga. Avoid substitutes.

MRS. MAY'S LETTER to WOMEN

More Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a bad case of female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and I took about six bottles. It fixed me up all right. The common symptoms of such a condition—pain when walking, irritation, bearing down pains and backache, nervousness and disordered digestion—soon passed away. I look much better now than I did before, and I recommend the Compound every time for female troubles, as it did for me all it is claimed to do. You have my permission to publish this letter." Mrs. J. MAY, 3548 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have any of the symptoms mentioned in Mrs. May's letter, remember what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and try it yourself. It is a good old-fashioned medicine, made from roots and herbs, and it has helped countless numbers of women.

If you need special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

DODDS—McMILLAN.

One of the prettiest and most popular weddings that has been solemnized in Medora in many a day occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McMillan at high noon Sunday, June 18, 1916. The contracting parties were Miss Gladys McMillan and Mr. Ralph Dodds. Miss McMillan is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McMillan, and is one of Medora's best and most esteemed young ladies. For a number of years past she has been one of the most efficient teachers of the Medora Public Schools. Mr. Dodds is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dodds of Brownstown, Ind., and is of the very highest type of young manhood, highly respected, and at present the junior member of Dodds & Dodds, in the mercantile business at Indianapolis.

The beautiful ring ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. Shaw of the Christian church of Medora, in the presence of the nearest relatives and most intimate friends. The bride looked very pretty in white dotted net over white satin and carried a bouquet of roses. After the nuptial ceremony and the congratulations of those present had ended, the bride led the way to the suite of dining rooms where four long tables were richly laden with the marriage feast. This was highly enjoyed by everyone. The afternoon was made more enjoyable with music upon the player-piano and by the Medora Citizens Band.

Mr. and Mrs. Dodds will spend a short honeymoon in Medora and Brownstown and will go to their new home in Indianapolis with the best wishes of their many admiring friends in Medora. They will be at home in Indianapolis to all their friends after June 21st.

REPLY TO CARRANZA

President Wilson's reply to Carranza's latest note emphasizes three points, first that the American troops will not be withdrawn from Mexico until the purposes of this government are accomplished; second, resentment to the discourteous intimations of the first chief, and third, that the United States has no ulterior or improper motives in its diplomatic representations. The terms of the reply are stern. There is little opportunity for quibbling in this communication.

The President cautions Carranza that failure to comply with the demands in the reply may result in the "gravest consequences." The administration knows full well what may result, but also knows that throughout this country there are thousands of young Americans ready to fight the lawless bands that have attempted to insult our national honor and integrity.

The reply informs the first chief exactly the attitude this country takes in the present crisis. The United States is right. That fact is indisputable. The United States wants to do for Mexico what the administration there cannot do or at least has been unable to do up to this time. The United States is responsible for conditions in Mexico under our own agreement and our course is plain.

The note emphasizes that the Mexican press has done more to inflame the minds of the Mexicans against this country than any other one source. The American newspapers, on the other hand, have taken the stand that if Mexico will take a reasonable attitude the whole question could soon be settled to the satisfaction of both countries. The United States will be prepared for any emergency. The action that has been taken this week does not necessarily mean intervention. However, developments indicate that the U. S. troops will be compelled to cross the international boundary. The people of this country still hope that war can be averted. They do not want hostilities. They are a peace loving people. But that does not mean they are too proud to fight. They will defend the United States and if necessary will prove to the world that their country can maintain the honor and integrity that has been the pride of all Americans since the first gun was fired in 1776.

COUNTY IS SWEEP BY SEVERE STORM

ter northeast of Columbus. A covered bridge was unroofed. Lightning hit several trees and splintered them. The damage to growing crops and orchards in that center is reported as heavy.

The storm which swept over this city was accompanied by the most vivid electric display that has been recorded here in years. The lightning began to flash about 10 o'clock and increased in intensity until the flashes were so frequent that the sky was lighted almost continuously. During the night there were numerous sharp peals of thunder and for more than an hour about midnight the roar was almost unbroken.

Shortly before 1 o'clock a heavy wind accompanied the electrical storm. Showers of rain which approached cloud bursts fell between midnight and 1:30 o'clock. The recorder at the local weather station showed that .86 of an inch of rainfall fell during the storm.

Reports from various sections say that trees were hit by lightning but that the current was not carried to barns or dwellings. The rain was of more concern to Jackson county farmers because of the water soaked condition of the fields.

ALL SHOULD WED. WAR HITS CUPID.

Helen Keller Breaks Rule and Discusses Love and Matrimony.

LEAVE WOMEN IN CONTROL.

Says Husband Could Propose All Vital Measures and Wife Dispose of Them—Woman Must Be Economically Free Before Matrimony Reaches Ideal State, She Thinks.

Chicago.—While in this city recently Miss Helen Keller was interviewed on a theme which she usually avoids—and that is love. In spite of her human handicaps, which she has almost overcome, she has some unique opinions on this absorbing topic.

The sightless and dumb prodigy pounded them out on her fingers and the face of her teacher, Mrs. J. A. Macy, who has been with her for twenty-nine years.

An eager face, lips that are ready to laugh and a flashing, alert mind helped along the interpretation of her love sentiments.

"I am not telling my love affairs," she spelled into the palm of her teacher's hand. "They are not for publication," although she admitted many proposals as a "start"—and possibly one heart affair.

HELEN KELLER.

The master of the house in ideal conditions such as are sensed by Miss Keller in a new day is not of the common species. He will be a master man, willing to permit his wife to be the disposer of the household supplies and the real "boss."

"Every household should be ruled by a bicameral government—a congress and a senate—such as the United States gave the Porto Ricans," she said. "The woman should of course be the house of representatives of the family. In this government there will be no filibustering, I hope, nor lobbying."

"Thus the man would propose all vital measures, and the woman would dispose of them. She would control the disposal of supplies principally, as women did among some of the primitive tribes."

This ideal state of matrimony, however, Miss Keller does not expect until woman is economically free. So long as man is the "moneybags" this future marriage system will be missing.

A happy interest flashed in her sightless eyes when she was requested to describe her ideal man.

"Of course he will be handsome, for eugenic reasons," she said, with a smile. "He doesn't have to be rich. I am paying my own passage through the world and am proud of it."

"And the ideal man doesn't have to be possessed of a college education. He must be one who thinks straight. Many men have obtained an education by their own efforts—for example, Mark Twain, one of my ideal men. For he was broad humanly, tender, yet strong and full of humor."

"Do you admire Napoleon?"

"No," she pouted on Mrs. Macy's palm, "nor Bismarck. True statesmen are dug from a vast patience."

"Every marriage should have love, and both man and woman should never lose sight of the happiness of their children. The state should pay for the upkeep of each child, for there is no greater service to the state than a woman's gift of a child—a greater service than the building of a warship. Besides, warships are no good without men. Woman furnishes the absolutely necessary supply—men. Her services are fundamental in wartime or out of war."

"All women should marry if they can get men to marry them." Her teacher laughed her out of her seriousness. "Yes, they should," she insisted. "It's essential for the race and evolution in the world."

One of the glories which Miss Keller delights in is the glory of her family. A great-great-grandfather of hers was one of the first colonial governors of Virginia—one of the Spotswoods, and this is a cherished name. She is a cousin of the southern hero, Robert E. Lee, and counts the Adamsons and the Everetts on her ancestral tree.

Her mother, Mrs. Katharine Adams Keller, is with her, busily darning stockings and mending shirt waists. A sister, Mrs. Mildred Keller Tyson, lives in Montgomery, Ala., her native state, and a brother, Phillips Brooks Keller, is an engineer. Miss Keller was a student and admirer of Phillips Brooks when she was nine years old, and she insisted upon giving her brother that name, her mother said.

MEN ARE BECOMING SCARCE.

Beautiful Blondes and Brunettes Seek Life Mates by Long Distance Means, but Their Hopes Are Being Shattered—Expert Warns Girls of Triflers.

Minneapolis.—War in Europe is playing havoc with mail order matrimony in America.

The lovelorn, languid and lackadaisically lax and even the triflers are trudging only in trifles in the romantic game of passion by post.

An ample young lady, Titian haired, dimpled and doll-like, in temporary charge of the offices of a matrimonial paper here, testified to these facts after qualifying as an expert on long distance love for home consumption.

"Things are not as they used to be here," said the doll-like person, shaking her Titian tinted tufts in an emphatic negative.

"Time was when money flowed in—$100 and more every day. Six address clerks were busy as could be. Then the war broke out. Only two girls are working now, and they're on half time."

"Any one who thinks American spinsters are husbanding prospects for obtaining husbands in advance of an after war demand for marriageable men in Europe is badly mistaken."

The paper is a monthly, published for the past twenty-five years. It's a sixteen page mail order affair, closely printed and filled with "ladies' and gentlemen's personals," as for example:

BEAUTIFUL Bohemian girl, with big laughing brown eyes, brown tresses, pretty teeth; age, twenty; five feet five inches tall; weight, 120 pounds; quiet disposition; neat dresser; lover of home; good cook; fond of music and dancing; Protestant faith. If suited will marry.

HELLO, GIRLS! I am the fellow that's easy to get along with; am thirty-two years old; five feet seven inches tall; weigh 138 pounds and have gray eyes and black hair; work in a wagon yard, but still at home with my parents. Would be delighted to hear from jolly, good natured girl, as I want a wife.

Scores of personals filled the paper for April, but those from men are growing woefully scarce.

The young woman in charge was concerned for both the paper and its patrons.

"A man from Montana called the other day," she said, "to tell how he got his first wife through the paper and that he wanted us to get him another."

"I asked him what he did with the first one and he said sadly that he was a widower by death and so, back for a second, though he didn't even hope to get one better than his first. So a satisfied customer always returns, and we're doing good for some people."

"But there are a lot—girls especially—who would do better by leaving well enough alone. Not because of triflers—although men are always trifling and don't have to correspond to do it—but because few find happiness."

"Men are always looking for money or women to keep house for nothing, and many girls would do better to keep their positions and stop seeking happy homes."

"Yet thousands are doing it. Our basement is full of applications—just loads of them."

The young woman then volunteered the statement that after years of observation of the "game," she wouldn't answer a gentleman's personal if it was accompanied by a photograph of a man more perfect than Adonis.

And another paradox. The owner of the paper is fifty and still single.

GERMANY FINDS NEW WAY TO FEED ITS INFANTS

Nurses Under Government Control—
Physicians Govern Sale of Milk
for Babies.

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Rotterdam, Holland, May 26. (By Mail).—Right into the baby's cradle, at his five daily meal times, reaches the hand of the great German government, in wartime. It snatches his milk bottle from him, empties out half his milk and fills up the bottle with breakfast food. Twice a day, when bottle time comes, this great hand keeps his bottle away from him and, with a spoon feeds him with apple sauce, crushed carrots and seived spinach. You can't get the babies to talk about it, though their mothers have a great deal to say on the subject. But the fact remains that the babies thrive on their new menus and that perhaps the baby experts of Germany have found a new and better way to fill baby stomachs.

"Here's my little muchacho," said a Spanish lady from Germany who had, as she said, "brought him out to get him some milk." She displayed a little fellow of eight months.

"In our town in Germany, if the doctor gives you a certificate, you may have a pint of milk a day for your baby."

"The doctor works with the government, you understand, and he makes every effort to persuade mothers to nurse their children at the breast."

"If he considers that a mother is able to do this, he will not issue a milk certificate and the mother will not be able to purchase milk."

"Nurses also are under government control and when they discover that a mother is able to nurse her baby it is her duty to notify the doctor to that effect and it then becomes his duty to cancel the milk ticket."

"The milk that is issued is not enough for a baby, of course, but the scientists have worked out a way of mixing it with an oatmeal or wheat broth. This is fed from the bottle three times a day. But he must have food two other times every day and the scientists are busily instructing physicians and nurses, who in turn instruct mothers how to cook apples, carrots and spinach for the babies."

"We cook the apples or carrots until soft as porridge and serve it to the baby with a spoon. He hasn't a tooth in his head, yet, but he has learned to eat from a spoon. We put the boiled spinach through a sieve."

"What does he like best of the three?"

"Apples, because we always put a little sugar into the apple sauce. Carrots he likes also, but spinach! He makes faces at it, but when he cries for food, he can't always be silenced even with spinach. He grows fat on his war food, too. My other children always had milk five times a day, and as much as they wanted. They liked milk, as all babies do. But this baby is learning to eat things that he doesn't like."

"I don't like to see him have to do it. I feel sorry when I must feed him spinach. Think of it! And so here I am in Holland to give him all the milk he wants for a time. He laughs and coos every time he sees the milk bottle coming. He knows the difference between milk and carrots."

"Doesn't he?" she said, turning to the baby. He said something which was taken for "yes."

An Indianapolis Back Yard.

Less than seven miles from the city of Indianapolis stands a small forest of native trees. If this same group of trees stood in Northern Michigan there are a thousand people of Indianapolis who would rave over them and make a special journey every so often just to look at them and enjoy their beauty.

Before the white men came, Indiana was fairly well covered with forest. Only a very small per cent. of the state along the west and northwest sides was prairie while the rest was forest. Of all this extensive growth of trees in Indiana and in neighboring states they grew to their very best in the well-watered valleys of central Hoosierdom.

No one could get an adequate idea of this forest from a simple description of the trees. My, what trees they are! They are not like the giant trees of the West of course, but in comparison with the second growth "sprouts" of the average forest in the east or north they are gigantic.

Most of them are white oak—one of the noblest monarchs of the American forests.—July OUTING.

ONE HUNDRED LEADING
HOOSIERS 1816-1916

(Prepared for the United Press by the Centennial Department of the Indiana Historical Commission)

JOHN TIPTON—81.

A mountaineer of East Tennessee, John Tipton, was born August 14, 1786, familiar with Indian nature by contact. Without education he came with his mother to the territory of Indiana in 1807 and settled in Harrison county.

Tipton belonged to a militia company and was an ensign at the battle of Tippecanoe. His commissioned officers were killed off early and General Harrison promoted Tipton to commander early in the fight.

Tipton served in the legislature three terms and was on the commission which selected the site of Indianapolis. In 1831 he was elected United States senator to fill a vacancy and later was re-elected for a term. In 1838 he superintended the removal of the disaffected Indians to the reservation west of the Mississippi.

A Grown Man
At a Penny Job

It has been estimated that it costs a department store 7 cents to deliver a package. But, a boy can deliver a $100 package.

It's different with ice. It takes a man to deliver 15 cents worth!

And there is this further difference: The ice manufacturer must DELIVER the ice before he can know whether you are going to buy it, or not.

ICE IS
More than a Product - It is A SERVICE

Ice is a NECESSITY in the summer time. And yet, how cheap it is! From 7 to 10 cents is the daily average expenditure for an average family. Ice preserves your food, thus safe-guarding your health. It makes your summer-drinks drinkable! In many forms of illness it is indispensable.

You can best realize the value of ice to you and your family if you will try to imagine a summer without it! And then—picture the reality: Ice at your door every day—foryou to take or not, as you choose

Telephone just once to one of the dealers named below, and ice will be at your door daily thereafter—to take or reject at your pleasure!

U. S. TROOPS MAY MOVE AT ONCE

Funston's Request For Forces
Speeds Up Mobilization.

MEXICAN ARMIES ACTIVE

Government Is Making Thorough
Preparations to Meet Any Emergency With Drastic Action—Serious Developments Expected.

Washington, June 21.—Major-General Frederick Funston wired the war department, asking that a force of nation guardsmen to a total of 65,000 be sent to him as soon as they are available.

The request is understood to have been based on disturbing reports
which have reached Funston's headquarters concerning the activity of Mexican forces south of the border.

A few hours previous to the receipt of this message in Washington Secretary Lansing had delivered to Elizeo Arrendondo, Mexican ambassador-
designate, one of the sharpest notes
ever addressed by one government to another.

This note was the formal reply of the United States to the threatening
note sent to Washington by the Carranza government on May 22, demanding an immediate withdrawal of the American forces from Mexico. The American reply, which was made,
flatly rejects the demand and serves
notice on Carranza that "grave consequences" will result from any attack
on American forces.

Major-General Bliss, assistant chief of staff, and Adjutant-General Henry
P. McCain, conferred concerning the Funston request for national guardsmen. It is understood that inquiries will be sent to the governors of the states asking how much time will be needed for their troops to mobilize.

Those national guard organizations
best in shape to move will be among those to go first. Officials of the militia division of the war department are inclined to think that these would include the national guard of New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Ohio
and Pennsylvania, although the department would prefer, if possible, to obtain part of the contingent from states in the vicinity of the border.

Should the situation demand immediate action, it is said that the department would probably not wait for the organizations to be mustered up to the required strength, but would enroll them at once and move them
to the border, trusting to fill up their ranks there.

On every side in official quarters
there were plain indications that the administration is expecting serious
developments in the very near future
and is laying plans to meet them with drastic action.

For Border Protection.

It was reiterated carefully at the state department that no aggressive
steps will be taken, other than a mobilization of additional troops on the border unless the Carranza forces should begin hostilities. It was stated that the sole policy of the administration at this time is to protect the border and that the mobilization of the national guard was undertaken with that end in view. At the same time it was declared if there be any gathering in force by Mexican troops
on the other side of the boundary line
such action would be regarded as serious and perhaps as hostile.

The government, it became known,
has considered the advisability of blockading all Mexican ports as the first step in any aggressive action that might become necessary. The purpose of this would be to prevent shipments of arms or any other war supplies
from reaching the Mexicans from any quarter.

For the part which the navy might have to play in maintaining a blockade, Secretary Daniels wrote to Chairman Tillman, of the senate naval committee, asking that an amendment be inserted in the navy bill increasing the enlistment strength of the navy
to 74,700, that the ships in reserve
might be manned 50 per cent full strength.

Another precaution taken against the possibility of war between the two countries was disclosed when Comptroller of the Currency Williams announced that he had authorized a nation bank on the border to move its gold reserve to an inland city for fear of a Mexican attack.

The embassy is not expecting any serious development to occur in less than a week, estimating that it will take at least that long for the note
to reach the Mexican populace through the press, and for Carranza and his cabinet to reach a decision concerning it.

Soon after the communication was sent to the embassy, President Wilson
and his cabinet met at the White House and for two hours discussed every angle of the situation. The president is said to have been particularly anxious to hear from Secretary of War Baker and Secretary Daniels
as to the ability of the two branches
of the service to meet any emergency which might arise. Secretary Baker was able to summarize unofficial reports which have reached him to the effect that the work of mobilizing the national guard is proceeding rapidly,

and that recruiting in many centers
is lively.

Special Agent Rogers at Mexico
City advised the state department that he was making arrangements for a special train to leave Mexico City for the purpose of carrying as many of the 1,000 of the American citizens
as wish to leave Vera Cruz. The navy department has provided ships to care for the Americans who arrive at Vera Cruz and other refugee vessels are being sent with the gunboats and other warships to Tampico and other ports
on both coasts.

Mr. Rogers reported that mass meetings and parades were being held in Mexico City by way of stirring up enthusiasm in support of the stand of the Mexican government, but that no violence against Americans or other foreigners had been attempted.

Up to now the navy department had not received any reply from Admiral Winslow, commander of the Pacific fleet for further details concerning the clash between American bluejackets and Mexicans at Mazatlan, in which one bluejacket was seriously
wounded and several Mexicans killed or wounded.

Publication by the state department of its reply to the Carranza government created a profound impression here, despite the fact that its contents had been somewhat discounted. Members of congress read it with particular interest and considerable enthusiasm was manifested
in the Democratic cloak rooms.

Contrary to the usual practice under which a communication of this kind is addressed to the local representative of a nation with a request that it be transmitted to his government, the American reply is addressed directly to "the secretary of foreign relations of the de facto government
of Mexico" (General Candido Aguilar),
who signed the Mexican note.

MINNESOTA HOLDS PRIMARY

Kellogg Leads For Senator; Democratic Gubernatorial Vote Close.

St. Paul, Minn., June 21.—Frank B.
Kellogg's victory in the Republican contest for United States senator, is the outstanding result of Minnesota's 1916 state-wide primary election. The St. Paul attorney romped into the nomination with a big lead over A. O.
Eberhart, his nearest competitor.

Other leading features of the primary were: Governor J. A. Burn-quist's overwhelming victory for the Republican gubernatorial nomination;
the close and uncertain three-cornered
race for the Democratic nomination
for governor; defeat of Congressman
George R. Smith, the only Minnesota
congressman to lose in the primaries,
and Senator Moses E. Clapp's poor showing.

Dan W. Lawler of St. Paul will be
Mr. Kellogg's Democratic opponent
for the senate, while Governor Burn-quist's adversary is still an unknown
quantity.

Presidential Nominations.

Washington, June 21.—President
Wilson sent to the senate the nomination of Robert F. Whitehead of Virginia, to be assistant commissioner of

W. H. Clay of Pennsylvania as second assistant commissioner. The nomination of Major-General J. B. Aleshire, to be quartermaster-general to succeed himself, was also made.

while the men were hunting. Lloyd died shortly after the shooting. Corner F. R. Maxwell was called. Both men resided at Mahalassville, six miles south of here.

Brown county, where he will give them military training for a week.

U. S. SOLDIERS GO TO DEL RIO

Fresh Outrages Keep Border
In a Flame.

FLAG FIRED ON BY MOB

Reported Americans Were Taken
From a Train and Shot—General
Pershing's Command Threatened by Large Carranza Force.

El Paso, Tex., June 21.—Fresh reports of outrages against Americans
in Mexico kept the border aflame
while a report from Del Rio bore out
the information received there previously that a body of Carranza troops is marching toward the border with the evident aim of attacking the Americans.

Precautions have been taken there
to forestall any offensive by the Carranza soldiers. Major Jarvis with three companies of the Third infantry
arrived at Del Rio from Eagle Pass.

American refugees arriving at Douglas, Ariz., told of an anti-American demonstration at Cananea in which the American flag, flying over the hotel in which was located the office of Colonel W. A. Julian, was made the target for hundreds of Mexican bullets.

Telegrams from interior Mexico reported a rumor current in Monterey
that a party of Americans at Cerralvo
an isolated mining town in Nueva
Leon, were massacred by Mexicans.
As far as known there is only one American in Cerralvo. His name is James Hughes. A telegram also reported that some Americans were taken from the train outside of Monterey and were reported to have been killed.

About 650 Americans reached the border from Cananea, representing practically the entire American population of the town.

A significant report has been received at Columbus, N. M., regarding the situation on the front at Namiqui-
pa, the most southerly point reached by General Pershing in his advance into Mexico. According to this report the Mexican and American troops are in close proximity and the Mexicans
are showing a threatening attitude.
The dispatch is taken to mean that a clash between these forces is likely to occur at any time.

A number of women nurses arrived
at the base hospital from Washington
and are now on duty at the hospital.
Plans have been made for enlarging
the base hospital many times its present size in the event of war, to make it the division hospital for all of the troops in this part of the border and in Mexico.

WILL COST $250,000 A DAY

U. S. Army is the Best Fed Soldier in the World.

Washington, June 21.—Only a rough estimate can be made of the cost of keeping 100,000 national guardsmen
along the border. It has cost approximately $10,000,000 to keep forces very-ing from 25,000 to 40,000 regulars for three months. This is at the rate of a little more than $100,000 a day. Proportionately, the militia would cost $250,000 a day, due to necessary expenses of bringing their equipment up to regular army standards.

The American soldier will continue to be the best fed in the world—at a cost of more than 30 cents a day for each man. His rock bottom ration, a day is: A pound of canned meat, or twelve ounces of bacon; a pound of hard bread, more than an ounce of coffee; sugar and salt. To this, even when campaigning, the commanding officer is expected to add whatever supplies money can buy.

ARKANSAS LIQUOR LAW VALID

Supreme Court Upholds State-Wide
Prohibition Act.

Little Rock, Ark., June 21.—The Arkansas supreme court, for the second time has sustained the validity of the state-wide prohibition act. The case was that of Charles Miller of Lafayette county, who was convicted of selling liquor and sentenced to serve
one year in the penitentiary, the only penalty permissible under the law.
The appeal alleged that the prohibition law is unconstitutional because it denies to the court the right to suspend sentence after conviction. The supreme court held that the legislature had the right to enact such a law
because there is no provision in the state Constitution forbidding such legislation.

German Banker Held.

El Paso, Tex., June 21.—Frederick
Griese, a German banker of Mexico
City, was under detention by agents
of the department of justice here,
charged with violation of the United States neutrality laws. Griese was prevented from crossing into Mexico.

Mail Clerk Killed.

Washington, Ind., June 21.—George King of Loogootee was killed near here when his automobile turned over,
following the explosion of a front tire.
King was a mail clerk on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern between Cincinnati and St. Louis.

100 INDIANA NURSES AWAIT COUNTRY'S CALL TO MEXICAN BORDER.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 21.—
One hundred nurses in Indiana,
fifty of them from Indianapolis,
are preparing to answer the call
of the country in case of war
with Mexico, according to officials at the Marion County Graduate Nurses' association.

The 100 nurses are regular members of the American Red Cross society. They are subject to a call to service at any time
and are in readiness to answer
it within twenty-four hours.

The Red Cross organization of the state will send a formal offer
of its service to Governor Ralston
as soon as the militia is ordered to the border, or any other developments in the Mexican situation necessitates.

KEY IS FOUND NOT GUILTY

Father Acquitted of Murder After Son
Is Convicted.

Crawfordsville, Ind., June 21.—Tas-
well B. Key of Hendricks county, whose trial on a charge of murder had been in progress here for several days, was acquitted by the jury that tried the case. Acquittal came on the third ballot. The jurors retired in the afternoon, following the completion of the instructions by Judge Jere West.
They had supper at a local restaurant before going to the jury room for their balloting. The jurors were out thirty-five minutes.

Key's son, Errol Key, was found guilty of the murder of his cousin, Forest Miller, whom he shot in a grave pit fight. The father was also charged with murder, the prosecution
declaring he had given the revolver
to his son, urging him to shoot to kill.

TEUTONS BREAK RUSSIAN CENTER

Czar's Army Crosses the Sereth
Driving Austrians.

DECISIVE BATTLE RAGING

Next Twenty-Four Hours Will Probably Decide If Russian Offensive
Can Beat Back Germans in Volhynia Beyond Kovel.

London, June 21.—Simultaneously
with official Austrian admission that the left wing of General Brusiloff's
army has crossed Sereth, driving the Austro-Hungarians before them in the direction of the Carpathians, came a statement by the German war office announcing that the Teutons have broken the resistance of the Russian
center and are "fighting their way forward."

The official Russian report begins
with the statement that "the enemy is furiously counter-attacking General Brusiloff's armies."

Thus the day's official news from the eastern theater indicates that General von Linsingen, who commands the Austro-German forces in Volhynia, has begun the great flanking movement designed to sweep the Russian center back beyond Lutsk
and Dubno and then envelope Brusil-loff's Bukovina and Galician armies.
The crossing of the Sereth, lengthening as it does, the Russian lines of communication still further, is believed to add to the sudden peril in which the Russian right wing finds itself, now that the thrust against Kovel, the commanding railway intersection, apparently has failed.

The next twenty-four hours are looked for by military critics to decide whether the new Russian offensive has sufficient driving power to beat back the Teutons in Volhynia beyond Kovel or whether German strategy and reinforcements have once more saved the Austrians from a decisive defeat.

A fierce bombardment of the French positions in the Vaux sector was continued without cessation. Three German attacks on the French positions
northwest of Hill 321, on the right bank of the Meuse, were repulsed during the night by machine gun and car-
tain fire.

With the exception of the bombardment in the sector of Fort Vaux, there was little activity on the French front.

PLAN WIDESPREAD BOYCOTT

Allied Powers Prepare to Forestall
Action of Central Empires.

London, June 21.—The allies are planning a commercial treaty imposing a strangleing boycott upon the central empires after the war.

This plan, the most far-reaching of its kind in the annals of modern history, was announced by the board of trade to be the result of the allies'
recent economic conference in Paris,
at which the entente powers were represented by members of the various cabinets. It is now being considered by the entente governments.

The board of trade, in issuing a statement, declares that the allies'
conference decided the new agreement
to be necessary to forestall the central empires, who, it is asserted, are now preparing for a similar plan, in conjunction with their allies, to become fully effective after the war.

OLEO DEALERS GO TO PRISON

Chicago Men Sentenced to Five and Nine Years and Fined.

Chicago, June 21.—Fred Marhoe, of the New City Produce company, and his brother, Edward Marhoe, owner of the Garden City creamery, were sentenced to five years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kas., and fined $25,000, and to nine years and six months imprisonment and fined $5,000
respectively, by Federal Judge Landis, on charges of illegally coloring and selling oleomargarine.

Two of their employees received lighter penalties.

For What It's Worth.

Laredo, Tex., June 21.—A rumor
was current in Nuevo Laredo, Mex., that War Minister Obregon had kidnapped General Carranza and was deporting him to Havana. This report was received with enthusiasm by the Mexican population as Carranza's popularity is on the wane, while Obre-gon is the present national idol. It is not credited on this side.

Would Pay U. S. Worker In War.

Washington, June 21.—Desiring to have the government set an example to private employment, President Wilson discussed with his cabinet plans
for preventing the loss of salaries or positions by government employees called into service with the national guard. The congress may be asked to pass a special law covering such cases.

Consular Appropriation Bill.

Washington, June 21.—The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was passed by the senate, carrying appropriations aggregating nearly $2,500,000 for the expenses of the diplomatic and consular service.

INDIANA RECRUITING GOES ON RAPIDLY

Col. Conde Asks Permission to Retire From Guard.

Indianapolis, June 21.—Recruiting
for the companies of the Indiana national guard has gone forward rapidly
since the mobilization order was issued by Governor Ralston, and most of the companies were assured of having their minimum peace strength
before further orders are issued.

Jeffersonville and Washington are making efforts to have reinstated companies which were mustered out of service recently, and at Shelbyville a movement has been started to organize a new company.

The first lieutenant of the company
is the officer in charge of the recruiting. Captains of the companies rapidly are completing all arrangements to make the companies ready to move with minimum peace strength when the order comes.

Ft. Wayne led in the recruiting reports received thus far since the mobilization order was issued.

Colonel Henri T. Conde, commander of the Second regiment of infantry,
made application to Governor Ralston
for retirement under the military age law and the application virtually has been acted on favorably.

Company A, signal corps, Captain Norman A. Nicolai, commanding, was the first company ordered to Fort Harrison. This will be the first unit to take possession of the military quarters, and with it will be the first separate battalion band of Marion.

BROTHER OF HERO ENLISTS

Pittsburg Volunteer Related to Victim
of Vera Cruz Occupation.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 21.—Among the young men enlisted at the navy recruiting office here was Richard E.
De Lowry, the seventeen-year-old brother of Francis De Lowry, who was killed when Vera Cruz was occupied by American forces in April, 1914.

Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall was present at the funeral of Richard De Lowry as the representative of the government and as the body of the young man was lowered into the grave
the vice-president stepped forward and dropped a red carnation on the coffin.

CHAPTER XV.

We Decide Our Course.

I accepted D'Artigny's outstretched hand, and permitted him to assist me down the bank. The new arrival was just within the edge of the forest, bending over a freshly kindled fire, barely commencing to blaze, and beside him on the grass lay a wild fowl, already plucked of its feathers. So intent was the fellow at his task, he did not even lift his head until my companion hailed him.

"Barbeau, here is the lady of whom I spoke—the wife of Monsieur Cassion."

He Stood Up and Made Me a Salute.

He stood up and made me a salute as though I were an officer, as odd a looking little man as ever I had seen, with a small, peaked face, a mop of black hair, and a pair of shrewd, humorous eyes. His dress was that of a courier du bois, with no trace of uniform save the blue forage cap gripped in one hand, yet he stood stiff as if on parade. In spite of his strange, uncouth appearance there was that in his face which won my favor, and I held out my hand.

"You are a soldier of France, Monsieur D'Artigny tells me."

"Yes, madame, of the Regiment Carignan-Salliers," he answered.

"I wonder have you served long? My father was an officer in that command—Captain la Chesnayne."

The expression on the man's face changed magically.

"You the daughter of Captain la Chesnayne," he exclaimed, the words bursting forth uncontrolled, "and married to Cassion! how can this be?"

"You knew him then—my father?"

"Ay, madame; I was with him at the Richelieu, at the village of the Mohawks, and at Bois de Blanc, where he died. I am Jacques Barbeau, a soldier for 20 years; did he not speak to you of me?"

"I was but a girl when he was killed, and we seldom met, for he was usually on campaign. Yet what do you mean by thus expressing surprise at my marriage to Monsieur Cassion?"

He hesitated, evidently regretting his impulsive speech, and glancing from my face into the stern eyes of D'Artigny.

"Monsieur, madame, I spoke hastily; it was not my place."

"That may be true, Barbeau," replied the Sieur grimly, "yet the words have been said, and the lady has a right to have them explained. Was there quarrel between her father and this Francois Cassion?"

"Ay, there was, and bitter, although I know nothing as to the cause. Cassion and La Barre—he whom I now hear is governor of New France—were alike opposed to Captain la Chesnayne, and but for reports they made he would have been the colonel. He struck Cassion in the mess tent, and they were to fight the very morning the Iroquois met us at Bois de Blanc. 'Twas the talk of the men that the captain was shot from behind."

"By Cassion?"

"That I cannot say; yet the bullet entered behind the ear, for I was first to reach him, and he had no other enemy in the Regiment Carignan-Salliers. The feeling against M. Cassion was so strong that he resigned in a few months. You never heard this?"

I could not answer, but stood silent with bowed head. I felt D'Artigny place his hand on my shoulder.

"The lady did not know," he said gravely, as though he felt the necessity of an explanation. "She was at school in a convent at Quebec, and no rumor reached her. She is thankful to you for what you have said, Barcommand at Fort St. Louis; I bring him orders now from Sieur de la Salle bidding him not to interfere with the governor's lieutenants. 'Tis the Chevalier de Baugis with whom we must reckon."

"True, he has control, and men enough, with Cassion's party, to enforce his order. And he is a hot-head, conceited, and holding himself a bit better than others, because he bears commission in the King's Dragoons. 'Tis said that he and De Tonty have had many a stiff quarrel since he came; but he dare not go too far. There are good men there ready to draw sword if it ever come to blows—De Tonty, Boisronnet, L'Esperance, De Marle, and the Algonquins camped on the plain below. They would be tigers if the Italian spoke the word; while I doubt not M. de la Durantaye would throw his influence on the side of mercy; he has small love for the captain of dragoons."

I spoke quickly, and before D'Artigny could voice decision.

"We will accept your guidance, monsieur. It is the best choice, and now the only one, for the time is past when we can expect the return of the canoes. Can we not at once begin the journey?"

It was an hour later, after we had eaten, that we left the bluff, and turned westward into the great woods. Barbeau led the way, moving along the bank of a small stream, and I followed, with D'Artigny close behind. As we had nothing to carry, except the soldier's rifle and blanket, we made rapid progress, and in less than half an hour we came to the Indian trail, which led southward from Green Bay to the headwaters of the Des Plaines.

It was late in the afternoon of the second day when we arrived at the forks of the Chicago river. There was a drizzle of rain in the air, and never saw I a more desolate spot; a bare, dreary plain, and away to the eastward a glimpse of the lake.

A hut of logs, a mere shack scarcely fit for shelter, stood on a slight eminence, giving wide view in every direction, but it was unoccupied, the door ajar. Barbeau, in advance, stared at it in surprise, gave utterance to an oath, and ran forward to peer within. Close behind him, I caught a glimpse of the interior, my own heart heavy with disappointment.

If this miserable place had been the headquarters of M. de la Durantaye, evidently it was so no longer. Not a vestige of occupancy remained, save a rotten blanket on the floor, and a broken bench in one corner. Rude bunks lined two walls, and a table hewed from a log stood in the center of the dirt floor. On this was a paper pinned to the wood by a broken knife-blade. Barbeau grasped it, and read the writing, handing it back to me. It was a scrawl of a few words, yet told the whole story.

"Francois Cassion, under commission of Governor la Barre, arrived with party of soldiers and Indians. At his orders we accompany the force to Fort St. Louis."

"DE LA DURANTAYE."

"Perhaps it is as well," commented D'Artigny lightly. "At least as far as my good health goes; but 'tis like to make a hard journey for you, madame."

"Is it far yet until we attain the fort?"

"A matter of twenty-five leagues; of no moment had we a boat in which to float downstream, but the trail, as I remember, is rough."

"Perchance there may be a boat," intercepted Barbeau. "There was the wreck of an Indian canoe a mile below here on the Des Plaines, not so damaged as to be beyond repair, and here is a hatchet which we will find"

"Murdered?"

"Ay, struck down from behind with a knife. No one knows who did it, but Cassion has charged the crime against Sieur d'Artigny, and circumstances are such he will find it difficult to prove his innocence."

The soldier stood silent, evidently reviewing in his mind all that had been told him, his eyes narrowed into slits as he gazed thoughtfully at us both.

"Bah!" he exclaimed at last, "the riddle is not so hard to read, although, no doubt, the trick has been well played. I know Governor la Barre, and this Francois Cassion, for I have served under both, while Monsieur la Chesnayne was my captain and friend. May I tell you what, in my judgment, seems best for you to do?"

I glanced at D'Artigny, and his eyes gave me courage.

"Monsieur, you are a French soldier," I answered, "an educated man, also, and my father's friend. I will listen gladly."

His eyes smiled, and he swept the earth with his cap.

"Then my plan is this—leave Monsieur Cassion to go his way, and let me be your guide southward. I know the trails, and the journey is not difficult. M. de la Durantaye is camped at the portage of the Des Plaines, having but a handful of men, to be sure, yet he is a gallant officer, and no enemy to La Salle, although he serves the governor. He will see justice done, and give you both safe convoy to Fort St. Louis, where De Tonty knows how to protect his officers. Faith! I would like to see Francois Cassion try to browbeat that one-armed Italian—'twould be one time he would meet his match."

D'Artigny laughed.

"Ay, you are right there, my friend. I have felt the iron hook, and witnessed how he wins his way with white and red. Yet he is no longer in the ground before us was strewn with dead.

useful." He stooped and picked it up from under the bench. "One thing is certain—'tis useless to remain here; they have left the place as bare as a desert. 'Tis my choice that we make the Des Plaines before dark."

The Des Plaines was a narrow stream, flowing quietly through prairie land, although bordered along its shores by a thin fringe of trees. We moved down along its eastern bank for perhaps a half league, when we came to the edge of a swamp and made camp. D'Artigny built a fire, and prepared my tent of boughs, while Barbeau waded out around a point in search of the wrecked canoe. He came back just at dusk towing it behind him through the shallow water, and the two men managed to drag it far enough up the bank to enable the water to drain out. Later, aided by a flaming torch, we looked it over, and decided the canoe could be made to float again. It required two days' work, however, before we ventured to trust ourselves to its safety.

But the dawn of the third day saw us afloat on the sluggish current, the two men plying improvised paddles to increase our speed, while I busied myself in keeping the frail craft free from water by constant use of a tin-cup.

Both men believed there was peace in the valley, except for the jealousy between the white factions at Fort St. Louis, and that the various Algonquin tribes were living quietly in their villages under protection of the Rock. D'Artigny described what a wonderful sight it was, looking down from the high palisades to the broad meadows below, covered with tepees, and alive with peaceful Indians. He named the tribes which had gathered there for protection, trusting in La Salle, and believing De Tonty their friend—Illini, Shawnees, Abenakis, Miami, Mohegans—at one time reaching a total of twenty thousand souls.

Owing to the leaking of our canoe, and many difficulties experienced, we were three days in reaching the spot where the Illinois and the Fox rivers joined their waters, and swept forward in one broad stream. The time of our arrival at this spot was early in the afternoon, and, as D'Artigny said, Fort St. Louis was situated scarce ten miles below, our long journey seemed nearly ended. We anticipated reaching there before night, and, in spite of my fear of the reception awaiting us, my heart was light with hope and expectation.

I was but a girl in years, excitement was still to me a delight, and I had listened to so many tales, romantic, wonderful, of this wilderness fortress, perched upon a rock, that my vivid imagination had weaved about it an atmosphere of marvel. The beauty of the view from its palisades, the vast concourse of Indians encamped on the plains below, and those men guarding its safety—the faithful comrades of La Salle in explorations of the unknown, De Tonty, Boisronnet, and all the others, had long since become to my mind the incarnation of romantic adventure. Wilderness born, I could comprehend and appreciate their toils and dangers, and my dreams centered about this great, lonely rock, on which they had established a home. But the end was not yet. Just below the confluence of the rivers there was a village of the Tamaraos, and the prow of our canoe touched the bank, while D'Artigny stepped ashore amid a tangle of low-growing bushes, that he might have speech with some of the warriors, and thus learn conditions at the fort. With his foot on the bank, he turned laughing, and held out his hand to me.

"Come, madame," he said, pleasantly, "you have never seen a village of our western tribes; it will interest you."

I joined him gladly, my limbs feeling awkward under me, from long cramping in the boat, yet the climb was not difficult, and he held back the boughs to give me easy passage. Beyond the fringe of brush there was an open space, but as we reached this, both paused, stricken dumb by horror at the sight which met our view. The ground before us was strewn with dead, and mutilated bodies, and was black with ashes where the tepees had been burned, and their contents scattered broadcast.

Never before had I seen such view of devastation, of relentless, savage cruelty, and I gave utterance to a sudden sob, and shrank back against D'Artigny's arm, hiding my eyes with my hand. He stood and stared, motionless, breathing heavily, unconsciously gripping my arm.

"Mon Dieu!" he burst forth, at last. "What meaneth this? Are the wolves again loose in the valley?"

He drew me back, until we were both concealed behind a fringe of leaves, his whole manner alert, every instinct of the woodsman instantly awakened.

"Remain here hidden," he whispered, "until I learn the truth; we may face grave peril below."

He left me trembling and white-lipped, yet I made no effort to restrain him. The horror of those dead bodies gripped me, but I would not have him know the terror which held me captive. With utmost caution he crept forth, and I lay in the shadow of the covert, watching his movements. Body after body he approached, seeking some victim alive, and able to tell the story. But there was none. At last he stood erect, satisfied that none beside the dead were on that awful spot, and came back to me.

"Not one lives," he said soberly, "and there are men, women, and children there. The story is one easily told—an attack at daylight from the woods yonder. There has been no fighting; a massacre of the helpless and unarmed."

"But who did such deed of blood?"

"'Tis the work of the Iroquois; the way they scalped tells that, and besides I saw other signs."

"The Iroquois," I echoed incredulously, for that name was the terror of my childhood. "How came these savages so far to the westward?"

"Their war parties range to the great river," he answered. "We followed their bloody trail when first we came to this valley. It was to gain protection from these raiders that the Algonquins gathered about the fort. We fought the fiends twice, and drove them back, yet now they are here again. Come, Adele, we must return to the canoe, and consult with Barbeau. He has seen much of Indian war."

The canoe rode close in under the bank, Barbeau holding it with grasp on a great root. He must have read in our faces some message of alarm, for he exclaimed before either of us could speak:

"What is it—the Iroquois?"

"Yes; why did you guess that?"

"I have seen signs for an hour past which made me fear this might be true. That was why I held the boat so close to the bank. The village has been attacked?"

"Ay, surprised and massacred; the ground is covered with the dead, and the tepees are burned. Madame is half crazed with the shock."

Barbeau took no heed, his eyes scarce glancing at me, so eager was he to learn details.

"The fiends were in force, then?"

"Their moccasin tracks were everywhere. I could not be sure where they entered the village, but they left by way of the Fox. I counted on the sand the imprint of ten canoes."

"Deep and broad?"

"Ay, war boats; 'tis likely some of them would hold twenty warriors; the beasts are here in force."

It was all so still, so peaceful about us that I felt dazed, incapable of comprehending our great danger. The river swept past, its waters murmuring gently, and the wooded banks were cool and green. Not a sound awoke the echoes, and the horror I had just witnessed seemed almost a dream.

"Where are they now?" I questioned faintly. "Have they gone back to their own country?"

"Small hope of that," answered D'Artigny, "or we would have met with them before this, or other signs of their passage. They are below, either at the fort, or planning attack on the Indian villages beyond. What think you, Barbeau?"

"I have never been here," he said slowly, "so cannot tell what chance the red devils might have against the white men at St. Louis. But they are below us on the river, no doubt of that, and engaged in some hell act. I know the Iroquois, and how they conduct war. 'Twill be well for us to think it all out with care before we venture farther. Come, D'Artigny, tell me what you know—is the fort one to be defended against Iroquois raiders?"

"'Tis strong; built on a high rock, and approachable only at the rear. Given time, they might starve the garrison, or drive them mad with thirst, for I doubt if there be men enough there to make sortie against a large war party."

"But the Indian allies—the Algonquins?"

"One warwhoop of an Iroquois would scatter them like sheep. They are no fighters, save under white leadership, and 'tis likely enough their villages are already like this one yonder, scenes of horror. I have seen all this before, Barbeau, and this is no mere raid of a few scattered warriors, seeking adventure and scalps; 'tis an organized war party. The Iroquois have learned of the trouble in New France, of La Salle's absence from this valley; they know of the few fighting men at the Rock, and that De Tonty is no longer in command. They are here to sweep the French out of this Illinois country, and have given no warning. They surprised the Indian villages first, killed every Algonquin they could find, and are now besieging the Rock. And what have they to oppose them? More than they thought, no doubt, for Cassion and De la Durantaye must have reached there safely, yet at the best, the white defenders will scarcely number fifty men, and quarreling among themselves like mad dogs. There is but one thing for us to do, Barbeau—reach the fort."

"Ay, but how? There will be death now, haunting us every foot of the way."

D'Artigny turned his head, and his eyes met mine questioningly.

"There is a passage I know," he said gravely, "below the south banks yonder, but there will be peril in it—peril to which I dread to expose the lady."

I stood erect, no longer paralyzed by fear, realizing my duty.

"Do not hesitate because of me, monsieur," I said calmly. "French women have always done their part, and I shall not fail. Explain to us your plan."

Program will be Given by Band at Second and Chestnut Streets if Weather Permits.

The last band concert of the summer to be given on Wednesday night will be held tonight at the corner of Second and Chestnut streets, if the weather permits. This concert was arranged for prior to the receipt of the request from the ministers, that the programs be given on some other night of the week so as not to interfere with the prayer meeting services. The band is under contract with the city to give a certain number of concerts during the summer and the concert that was to have been given last Wednesday was postponed on account of rain. ## NEW LEGAL POINT HEARD BY COUNCIL

four miles of improved streets here had been paid by the owners of the property while the proposed improvement was to be made at the expense of the entire township. The question of flushing the streets was also discussed in a general way.

Following the meeting some of the councilmen expressed the opinion that nothing would be done in the matter at this time. They said that the petitions had been granted and steps taken to order the improvement and that they did not believe it advisable to step in and interfere on a technical point of law which apparently was not settled.

The improvement of Seventh street between Broadway and Ewing was brought up for discussion and will be settled Thursday night. The contractor employed to haul gravel on the block was notified to discontinue the work until a decision is reached concerning the proposed permanent improvement.

ROAD BUILDERS MEET.

Contractors from the South in Session at Wilmington.

By United Press.
Wilmington, N. C., June 21.—Road-builders from all over the south are among the 5,000 delegates and visitors attending the annual meeting of the North Carolina Good Roads association at Wrightsville Beach, June 21, 22 and 23.

Work is completed on the large auditorium constructed at Wrightsville Beach for the convention.

Delegates are expected to center attention on three proposed roadway projects—the Wilmington-Charlotte-Ashville Highway, the Wilmington-Fayetteville Highway, and the Wilmington-Goldsboro Highway.

An important feature of the convention will be practical demonstrations in road building and maintenance. Governor Locke Craig has promised to address the meeting.

We do "Printing that Pleases."

balance will probably be distributed among the counties or states through which it passes. The Jackson Highway has not yet been established and the purpose of the inspection trip is to ascertain if the route is feasible.

Those who are interested in the movement declare that it is the most direct route between Chicago and Louisville and as most of the roads are in good condition the majority of north and south tourists will follow it in preference to the Dixie Highway which is circuitous and passes through considerable rough and hilly country. The route proposed for the Jackson Highway in this state is that which was offered to the Dixie Highway Association and which for reasons unknown was refused in favor of the much less convenient route through French Lick Springs.

The local members of the Jackson County Motor Club are planning to meet the inspecting party north of this city and probably at Columbus. The officials will be escorted to this city and then to Brownstown where another delegation will accompany them to Vallonia. Vallonia citizens have planned to accompany the party over the Millport road to Salem.

On account of the construction of the new concrete highways in Brownstown township it will be necessary to take the officials over another road to Vallonia until the concrete stretch is reached. The portion to be improved will be part of the proposed Jackson Highway.

INDIANA GUARDSMEN MAY MOBILIZE NEXT SATURDAY

Capt. J. J. Toffey, Inspector of State Troops, Advises Adj.-Gen. Bridges to Fix That Date.

COULTER WILL SUCCEED CONDE

By United Press.
Indianapolis, June 21.—Next Saturday will probably be the day for the mobilization of the Indiana National Guard at Ft. Benjamin Harrison. Captain J. J. Toffey, United States army inspector of the Indiana troops, today said he would advise Adjutant-General Bridges to concentrate the Indiana guard at Ft. Harrison next Saturday unless hurry up orders were received from the war department before that time. Lieutenant-Colonel Coulter, of Vincennes, will be selected by Governor Ralston to succeed Col. Henry Conde, who has asked to be placed on the retired list, according to guard officers at the state house.

The offer of Captain A. C. Chittick, of Frankfort, of a regimental infirmary will be accepted. It was said at headquarters today. The infirmary is of sixteen men recruited at Frankfort.

Captain Charles B. Calvert, of the watermaster's department, announced today that he was planning for 18,000 rations a day or food for 3,600 men.

MORE RECRUITS NEEDED FOR CO. K.

make Indiana congratulate Seymour for our efforts in this crisis! Let's show them the kind of men we can offer!"

Capt. Abel received word from headquarters this afternoon that Capt. George S. Greene, retired, former captain of an Indianapolis company, a man who has had fourteen years experience and who is one of the best shots in the state, had volunteered his services and had been assigned to the position of First Lieutenant of Company K. The addition of Lieut. Green will add considerably to the strength of the local company, and Capt. Abel was very much pleased to hear that he had been assigned to his company.

To the stirring roll of the drum the militiamen were put through strenuous drill workouts on North Chestnut street this morning and afternoon. Capt. Abel and Second Lieut. Baldwin alternating in drilling the men both in foot movements and in the manual of arms.

Several more members who have been out of the city arrived last night and this morning and reported for duty. Two men are reported on the sick list.
